Subject: HELLO FROM BBC LONDON TV

Hello

I work as a reporter/producer at BBC London TV

I am hoping you will be able to help us answer a few questions we have following last night's incidents at London Stadium ?

- Sky Sports News has been saying that the “operators of the ground” have released a statement saying they were happy with the levels of stewarding at the stadium last night. Is that you ? And if so is that statement available to us ? If not – do you know who would have released that statement ?
- I have seen an organisation called E20 being described as the owners of London Stadium – is that a subsidiary of the LLDC ? If so – and you feel that they would be best to speak to today – could you let us know what the best contact for them is please
- I understand that Chris Allison was appointed as a consultant following recent problems. Would there be a view as to how his role has worked so far ? And would he be available to speak to us today ?
- Could you tell us who was responsible for the stewarding at the match last night
- Who would have paid for the stewards at the match last night ?
- Who has overall responsibility for London Stadium ? Or how is the responsibility shared between the tenants (West Ham) and the LLDC on a match night ?
- Would someone from the LLDC be available to speak today ? Or will you be doing an interview with another part of the BBC today in front of a camera (if so we can share that footage) ?

I appreciate that you must be getting lots of requests from journalists at the moment. But I just want to make sure we are getting our facts right and giving you the right to comment.

I will look forward to hopefully hearing from you soon

Thank you
